

PETER OROSZ (PETER@KZAMM.COM)

Writer with 10 years of experience in online media. Currently living in Budapest.

Work experience

May 2015 – Present

On sabbatical

Write freelance articles and go on long walks, most recently across the Zagros Mountains.

July 2012 – May 2015

Budapest Editorial Operations Manager, Gawker Media

Recruited, trained, managed and led an editorial team serving the Gawker Media titles Gizmodo, io9, Jalopnik and Kotaku.

February 2009 – June 2012

European Correspondent, Jalopnik

Wrote reports and essays about European car culture, covered Formula One with crayon drawings and took photographs.

March 2008 – January 2009

Screenwriter, Video Presenter, Community Manager, Index.hu

Designed and edited a blog about do-it-yourself videomaking, and wrote and presented video features about popular science.

October 2005 – February 2008

Community Manager, Totalcar

Founded, wrote and edited Belsőség, a blog about car culture, wrote reports from European car events and motor races, and oversaw Totalcar's community efforts.

Projects

Kinja in Hungarian (2012–2015)

Created and maintained Hungarian translation of Kinja, Gawker Media's publishing system.

Freelance writing (2004–present)

Write and photograph features about food, travel, cars, walking and technology, published by Make, Roads & Kingdoms, Vanity Fair, Wired and other sites and magazines. I write in English and Hungarian.

Education

MD, Semmelweis University, 2005

References are available upon request, alternatively contact the companies listed. Visit <http://kzamm.com/> for examples of my published work.